Mount Rushmore

America's "Shrine to Democracy" sends a message as strong as the granite from which it is carved. The faces of U.S. presidents Washington, Jefferson, Roosevelt and Lincoln tower majestically over the Black Hills.

Crazy Horse Memorial

Witness history in the making at Crazy Horse Memorial, where the face of the great Lakota leader, Crazy Horse, is emerging on the world's largest mountain carving. When completed, it will stand 563 feet high and 641 feet long.

Badlands National Park

Once a wooded forest where dinosaurs roamed, prairie winds and centuries of rains have formed deep gorges and sharp, haunting lunar-like spires. Today, the 244,000 acre park serves as a fossil repository, wildlife sanctuary and explorer's dream. The Badlands National Park is located east of Rapid City about 50 miles, with a 32 mile loop off of Interstate 90. We stop at Cedar Pass Visitor's Center and will take strolls out into the Badlands. There are nine scenic overlooks along the Badlands Loop Road.

Wounded Knee Cemetery - Pine Ridge Reservation

Pine Ridge Reservation is an Oglala Sioux Native American reservation located in the southwestern part of South Dakota. It is the eighth largest reservation in the United States, larger than Delaware and Rhode Island combined. We will take a day-trip to the Pine Ridge to visit various attractions and experience some Lakota culture.

President Theodore Roosevelt established Devil's Tower National Monument on September 24, 1906. The spectacular rock formation known as Devil's Tower and the surrounding countryside, home to a myriad of plant and animal life, attract visitors from around the world. Visitors delight in the beauty of the area and enjoy the activities offered at the monument. American Indians consider the area sacred, a place for prayer and renewal. Devil's Tower is located in the northeast part of Wyoming, approximately 50 miles from the South Dakota border.

An internationally known emporium of galleries, 26 retail departments and a restaurant with great coffee, homemade pies and donuts, and of course, ice water, it is a 76,000 square foot American experience which includes the backyard Branding Iron Arcade, and a life-size animated T-Rex for the kids. It is a must to see.

Big Horn Mountains and the Bozeman Trail

Any story about Wyoming, or the Old West, wouldn't be complete without including a chapter on the Big Horn Mountains. It's a story about the region's colorful past -- a history filled with conflict between Indian and white man, rancher and homesteader. The first white men known to visit the area were those in the Wilson Price Hunt (Astorian) Party in 1811. Many years passed before others arrived. Crow, Sioux, Cheyenne and other Indians inhabited the area and sought control of the tremendous hunting ground where elk, deer, buffalo and antelope were abundant. Early conflicts between Indians, trappers and traders occurred when small parties began trapping the steams in the area, now known as Johnson County. This area was in the heart of Indian Territory, established by a treaty signed in 1851. The treaty was violated many times, especially by emigrants on their way to Montana gold fields in the early 1860s. Seeking the easiest way for prospectors, John W. Bozeman established his route through the Powder River Country in 1864. Increased travel on this trail and numerous violations of the treaty precipitated a series of battles. Indian skirmishes gave way to range wars. In 1868, Nelson Story was one of the first to drive Texas cattle over the Bozeman Trail into Montana and cattle soon replaced buffalo on the lush grazing lands.
